Nazaré

Nazaré beach, with a mild climate and natural beauty, has one of the oldest traditions in Portugal linked to the arts of fishing. The beach is known for its length and the brightly colored awnings that decorate the white sand beach.

Currently, the city's biggest attraction is waves and surfing, thanks to the "Canhão da Nazaré", an underwater geomorphological phenomenon that allows the formation of giant, perfect waves, most visible between the months of November and March. Hawaiian surfer Garrett McNamara gave him worldwide visibility when, in 2011, he surfed the biggest wave in the world on a sand bottom, measuring around 30 meters, at Praia do Norte.

Mosteiro de Alcobaça
Classified as a World Heritage Site by UNESCO, this imposing monastery is one of the most impressive and beautiful testimonies of Cistercian architecture in all of Europe.

Construction began in 1178 and ended around 100 years later. On the church's facade, only the Gothic portico is original. Flanking it, the lightness of the statues of Saint Benedict and Saint Bernard contrasts with the baroque weight of the frontispiece and the bell towers that were added in the 18th century, a time when the monastery's last dependencies were also completed. The highlights of this complex include the long Church, approximately one hundred meters long, the cloister, the Chapter room, the dormitory, the monks' room, the refectory and the famous 18th century kitchen. It currently houses the tombs of D. Pedro and Dona Inês de Castro.
